

Jenna Reed-Cote recently graduated from the UVic Social Work program, with hopes of ultimately being certified as a Child Life Specialist. Right from the get-go her parents were told that she would probably never sit up on her own, but they never said anything about achieving the ranks of a 2nd degree black belt in Karate, which she did just for fun (she also sat up right on schedule, but that was to make a point). She's excited about learning from the women of this group, as well as sharing, with the hopes of building a network of strong women who continue to fight the odds and live the lives they dreamed of.
